

Coronavirus Notice: Georgia MLS Training Institute Classes Will Be Held Remotely

In light of the health concerns related to the spread of the coronavirus, COVID-19, Georgia MLS Training Institute has moved from "live" classes to "virtual" classes. We will continue to hold virtual classes until April 27, 2020, tentatively.

This decision is in line with our commitment to maintaining the continuity of classes with minimal interruption to help you achieve your educational pursuits while ensuring the safety of our students and staff.

To participate in a virtual class, you must have a computer with a video webcam. You must enable the video so that you are visible. You may also use a smartphone; however, data rates may apply, and data may be consumed quickly. Therefore, a computer with a webcam is strongly recommended.

Virtual classes will maintain the same class standards and requirements as if you were physically among your classmates and instructor. The same policies for attendance and participation apply. If you are enrolled in a virtual class, you will receive an email before the class start date with login and other pertinent information.

Thursday morning Open Session final examinations have been suspended.

We appreciate your cooperation and understanding. We will continue to provide updates and information as necessary to keep you up-to-date with your classes.

For additional information about the coronavirus, please review the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) website.
